FOREWORD

R. BRUCE ETHERIDGE, Director
N. C. DEPARTMENT OF CONSERVATION AND DEVELOPMENT

In order to fill a long-felt need for a publication containing lists of all the manufacturing concerns in North Carolina, this book has been designed and published so as to include a wealth of statistical information about the State. Such data as that revealed in the following pages were made imperative for public distribution by the increasing demand for industrial information about North Carolina and the program of advertising and promotion now being undertaken by the State. In view of the above, it was thought advisable to include in the volume essential facts regarding the State's rapid industrial development, together with the factors which have been outstanding in making this development possible. The direct references to certain leading industrial opportunities to be found in North Carolina were made for the purpose of informing interested capital of some operations which might be undertaken in the State under conditions that have proved favorable to manufacturing.

The full import of North Carolina's industrial leadership in the South is gained only after a thorough understanding has been had of the State's attitude toward industry, and the immense wealth of natural and physical resources has been surveyed. Due to the nature of this publication, these important factors have been treated only briefly. Complete information is available upon request to the Department of Conservation and Development.

It is planned to issue similar directories at intervals in the future to make possible a continuous inventory of the State's industrial progress. Particular efforts have been made to list every firm in the State, and toward this end letters were addressed to each and all available industries in the State. Lists made from replies have been thoroughly checked. Subsequent volumes, as with this one, must depend largely upon the cooperation of individual firms throughout the State for their accuracy. For this reason it is suggested that any firms, which have been inadvertently omitted in this publication, communicate this information to the Department.

The manner in which the information in the Directory has been handled was dictated by the desire to give data as complete as possible on each individual firm, without revealing financial and other confidential matters. The various classifications follow closely those recently adopted by the U. S. Bureau of The Census, and make it possible to ascertain quickly the principal type of product manufactured by each individual firm.

The information contained in this volume supplements the recent survey of the State published under the title, North Carolina: Today and Tomorrow. And like this book, a charge to cover printing and publishing of the Directory was made necessary because of the fact that funds in the regular operating budget of the Division of Commerce and Industry did not provide money for this purpose.

Acknowledgment has previously been made for the splendid cooperation received from various agencies, but I wish to take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation for this aid, and especially to the North Carolina Department of Labor, which collaborated in this publication.

R. Bruce Etheridge, Director,

NORTH CAROLINA

Greater industrialization of the South is the unmistakable trend of the times. North Carolina has established herself as a leader in this type of development; and, according to indications, should maintain her present position.

North Carolina has long led the South in the number of industrial wage earners, wages paid, value added to raw material by manufacturing, and value of products. The State has proved its adaptability to further industrial development.

In the above-mentioned industrial development, and in the plans for present and future expansion, the attitude of the State toward industry has been a primary factor. Based upon the many favorable natural conditions existing in North Carolina, plus the sincere desire on the part of the State to facilitate sound industrial growth—whether developed by local or out-of-State capital, the existing policy is one that seeks to insure as far as it is possible to do so, the success of investment and enterprise in private business. The foregoing does not imply undue government intervention, but rather emphasizes the State's active interest in and cooperation with industrial operations.

The partnership of state and business in North Carolina has been a most successful one. There has been no attempt on the part of either one to usurp control, nor has there been any indication that either has ever lost sight of the other's welfare. The splendid results of this partnership are evident in the advanced public works, public welfare, and educational systems maintained by the government on the one hand; and in the harmonious, progressive, and fair-minded principles motivating industry on the other hand.

The value to the Commonwealth of mutual benefits derived from public and private cooperation is manifest in the present fiscal policy of the State, whereby North Carolina is able not only to balance its budget, but is committed by constitutional mandate to reduce its State, county and municipal debt by the amount of $3 for $2 borrowed. The result of such a program followed for a period of years will be reduced taxes.

North Carolina is one of the few States in the Nation which levies no State tax on real property. It is the only State which maintains all of the public schools for a uniform eight months' term, all of the county roads as well as the State highways, and all prisoners from State funds, without the imposition of any local property taxes. By relieving the counties, cities, and towns of the property taxes for schools, highways and prisons, the State government has made it possible for the counties and other local units to keep their property tax rates at about one-half of what would be required if they had to bear this expense from local taxes. The only purposes for which the local subdivisions now must levy property taxes are for current operating expenses and debt service.

Industries now considering locations are asked to look at the tax picture, not only from the standpoint of what the taxes are at present, but also from the angle of how much taxes are going to have to be increased (elsewhere) within the next few years to offer the facilities now available in North Carolina.

GEOGRAPHY

North Carolina's geographical location in the South Atlantic States is highly favorable to manufacturing. Climate and soils, ranging from the coast to the tops of the highest mountain ranges in Eastern America, are varied, thereby permitting the production in large quantities of many different raw materials and the operation of diverse lines of manufacture. Markets of the more populous eastern and middle western sections of the country are easily accessible, as are those of the far South. The State is located within approximately 600 miles of 55.8 per cent of the total population of the United States.

Situated on the eastern slope of the Appalachian Mountains, the topography of the State can best be described as a vast incline, extending from the Atlantic Ocean on the east to altitudes of nearly 7,000 feet along the mountain crests in the west. The slope divides itself into three physiographic regions: in the west is the Mountain Region, composed of the broad Appalachian Plateau, bounded on the west by the Great Smoky Mountains and on the east by the Blue Ridge; the second, a submontane or Piedmont Plateau Region, extending from the foot of the mountains to what is known as the "fall line," which runs in a northeast-southwest direction through the counties of Northampton, Halifax, Wake, Lee, Hoke, and Scotland; the third, or Coastal Plain, extending from the Piedmont to the coast.

From the Mountain Region to the Piedmont the transition is very sharp, there being a drop of not less than 1,500 feet within a very few miles. The Piedmont, as well as the Coastal Plain, slopes gradually to the ocean, the average slopes being approximately one foot to the mile.

The total area of the State is 52,426 square miles.

CLIMATE

In general, the climate of North Carolina may be said to be typical of that usually found in the warm temperate zone. Both temperature and rainfall are affected by the State's relation to the ocean on the east and the high mountains on the west. The wide variety in climate is due to the unusual range of topography encountered in the State.

The annual mean temperature of the three principal regions of North Carolina are as follows:

	Spring	Summer	Autumn	Winter	Year
Coastal Plain	60	77	63	44	62
Piedmont Plateau	59	77	60	42	60
Mountain	54	71	56	38	55
State	58	75	60	42	59

The normal average precipitation for North Carolina is about 50 inches.

POPULATION

1930	3,170,276
1937 (estimated)	3,492,000

The data presented above show that the population increase in North Carolina has been in tune with the very rapid rate of increase for the United States as a whole, with the State's increase being considerably above the national average.

In order to grasp the full import of North Carolina's increase in population, two factors should be borne in mind: the increase has taken place in spite of the fact that the State has received the smallest part of the immigration to the United States from foreign countries, and has contributed more migrants to the other States than it has received from them.

The increase in population by major regions is shown in the following table:

Region	1890	1930	No. Increase	Per Cent Increase
Highlands	250,376	457,455	207,079	82.7
Piedmont	723,384	1,560,741	837,357	115.7
Upper Coastal	423,319	839,781	416,462	98.4
Tidewater	220,863	321,299	91,431	41.4

There are two important racial elements in the population of North Carolina, white and negro, and only an insignificant proportion of other races. The foreign born in the population is too small in number to be considered, except to point out that they have in recent years continuously decreased in proportion to the total population.

In 1930, the per cent of white population was 70.49. The population by types of community was 809,847 urban and 2,360,429 rural.

MANUFACTURING

Industry holds these things first among all the factors favorable to its successful operation: abundant basic raw materials, geographical location as it pertains to climate and proximity to markets, adequate power at reasonable cost, transportation facilities, reasonable taxes, and an ample supply of intelligent labor. All of these basic factors controlling industry have been available in North Carolina to a degree that has permitted this State to assume a leading place in both the South and in the Nation.

Of advantage from many angles is the fact that manufacturing plants have not centered in a few localities of the State, but have spread out over a wide territory. There are not, because of this reason, the resulting concentrations of huge metropolitan populations, although the larger towns in the State offer virtually all of the advantages from the standpoint of manufacturing requirements, without the congestions which add to manufacturing costs and create other problems.

North Carolina ranks first in the Nation in the manufacture of tobacco, cotton textiles, and in the production of wooden dining room and bedroom furniture.

There follows a summary of manufactures in North Carolina for the year 1935:

ANALYSIS OF MANUFACTURES

I. Chemicals

With the exception of fertilizer manufacture (pulp paper is treated under Wood Remanufacture), the chemical and allied industries group is not well developed in North Carolina. This failure to expand in chemicals does not mean that opportunities do not exist, for there are numerous developments that could be successfully undertaken.

One of the most outstanding developments in the State and in the South is the manufacture of ethyl-dibromide from sea water by the Ethyl-Dow Chemical Company at Wilmington.

Favorable operating conditions, abundance of water for processing, and nearby markets for pulp and paper supplies, finishing compounds for the textile trades, insecticides for home and farm use, and coal tar products for distribution, are some of the most promising opportunities for development in North Carolina.

II. Clay, Glass, Stone

The commercial deposits of residual clays found in North Carolina are the largest known in the world. The quantity and quality of these clays make North Carolina especially rich in opportunities for large scale development in ceramics. Some highly interesting experiments in the manufacture of whiteware—dishes and porcelain—has been started at Spruce Pine in western North Carolina.

The manufacture of glass from native sand and the further expansion in brick, tile, concrete products, and high-grade pottery offer distinct possibilities.

III. Food and Allied Products

In spite of the fact that North Carolina is one of the leading agricultural States in the Union, ranking fifth in this respect, large quantities of foodstuffs are imported each year. Farm specialists state that North Carolina could easily double its production of raw products for processing and packing, were adequate facilities available in the State to handle these products.

The diversified farming program now in effect throughout the State has resulted in a tremendous increase in the production of beef cattle, swine, dairy cattle, and poultry. In addition to canning and preserving, the opportunities for meat packing and the production of dairy and poultry products are imminently worth further investigation.

IV. Leather and Leather Goods

Only a very small portion of the leather finished in North Carolina is utilized by the few manufacturers in the State. The production here and in neighboring States, however, is sufficiently large to supply materials to a much larger number of local users, should they establish in North Carolina.

North Carolina manufactures only a small amount of rubber products, but from the standpoint of labor, proximity to markets, and its location in the low cost production area of the South, is in excellent position to offer attractive inducements to manufacturers of rubber products.

V. Wood and Its Remanufacture

The most significant development in the South in recent years has been the rapid move to this section of the pulp and paper industry. Although not shown under Lumber and its Remanufacture in the U. S. Census of Manufactures, North Carolina has four pulp plants—two in the east and two in the western part of the State.

In connection with the above pulp developments in the State and in the South, North Carolina is strategically located to receive pulp from the entire area to finish and distribute throughout the east and middle-west. Plants locating in the eastern part of the State would have the advantage of water shipping through the deep sea ports of Wilmington and Morehead City.

The vast timber acreage of North Carolina (approximately 20,000,000 acres of forest lands), the favorable climatic and soil conditions permitting fast growth of forest trees, and the advanced program of forestry management to insure a sustained yield from the forest lands, should prove of special interest to wood-using and related industries desiring to locate in the State.

VI. Metals and Metal Products

The manufacture of metal products in North Carolina is carried on mainly to supply the needs of local industries for parts and repairs. The location of the State with respect to the large steel producing areas does not appear to be favorable to the manufacture of heavy machines and parts, but due to the large demands for equipment to supply the textile, furniture, and tobacco industries, excellent opportunities exist here for producers of travelers, shuttles, knitting needles for hosiery machines, reeds, hinges, hardware and metal products used in tobacco manufacture.

VII. Mine and Quarry Products

The following opportunities are listed as being outstanding in North Carolina by the State Geologist: the development and operation of low-grade gold deposits, development of lithium (spodumene) deposits, mining vermiculite and low-grade asbestos, kaolin recovery plants, and the mining of talc and pyrophyllite.

VIII. Textiles and Textile Products

An examination of the Census Report on this industry shows first that North Carolina leads the Nation in cotton textiles, but that the State also offers outstanding opportunities for the manufacture of woolen and worsteds, hosiery, silk, rayon, and wearing apparel. The number of finishers and dyers is due for enlargement as the State maintains its textile leadership.

A field of operation not now crowded in North Carolina is the manufacture of paper boxes and containers for the textile trade.

NATURAL RESOURCES

AGRICULTURAL.—Farm lands in North Carolina total to some 24,685,250 acres, with 4,191,920 acres under cultivation in the year 1937. The State's crops have approximated the half-billion-dollar mark in the past, notably during the period immediately following the World War. In the year 1937, the cash value of the crops was approximately $300,000,000. The State's usual rank is fifth in the value of farm crops, third in the matter of gross income and third in cash income.

Cotton, tobacco, corn, and peanuts are the State's major cash crops. Acreages for these principal cash crops in 1937 were as follows: corn, 2,296,120 acres; cotton, 1,077,075 acres; tobacco, 639,804 acres; peanuts, for nuts, 234,369 acres. The number of acres devoted to commercial truck farming varies from year to year, but averages somewhere in the neighborhood of 275,000 acres. Peach, apple, and pecan trees of bearing age together number about 5,000,000.

The rapid development of new commercial uses for farm products is possibly the outstanding factor affecting both agriculture and industry today. Undoubtedly the South, and particularly North Carolina, occupies strategic positions for industrial expansion in view of the fact that enormous stores of usable agricultural resources are to be found here.

FOREST RESOURCES.—The forest tree species of North Carolina range from pines and lowland hardwoods along the Atlantic Coast to mountain hardwoods and spruce on the peaks of the Appalachians. In extent, the forest lands comprise some 20,000,000 acres. These lands are roughly divided as follows: 9,000,000 acres in farm woodlands; 1,000,000 acres in national forests; and 10,000,000 acres classified as all other woodlands.

The chief commercial species are loblolly, longleaf, slash, shortleaf and pitch pines; red, white, black and chestnut oaks; gum, cypress, hickory, yellow poplar, locust, hemlock, maple, ash, and cedar.

Under proper management it is estimated that the vast forest area of the Coastal Plain region, some 12,000,000 acres in size, will produce from one to one and one-half cords of pulpwood per acre per year.

The forestry program of North Carolina is well advanced. Through the State-County Cooperative Forest Fire Control Organization and Fire Protective Association, more than 13,000,000 acres of forest lands are provided protection. The State maintains an active forestry management program and operates two nurseries to produce seedlings for planting on both public and private lands.

Mineral Resources.—Extractive operations in North Carolina's mining industry have witnessed material increases in recent years. The State is the Nation's leading producer of feldspar and mica, and contains the largest known deposits of residual clays.

Some of the outstanding developments in the mining industry during the past ten years have been the establishment of gold recovery plants, the greatly increased production of talc and pyrophyllite—the only commercial deposits of the latter known to exist in the world being found in this State—and developments in vermiculite, spodumene, and kaolin clay.

The average annual value of the mineral production of North Carolina is approximately $7,500,000.

The recent establishment of a mineral laboratory in the State, designed to work closely with the extractive industries and to seek new uses for native minerals, has centered a great deal of attention upon the industry in North Carolina.

Water Resources.—An abundant, though not excessive, rainfall throughout the State provides ample quantities of water to supply continuous flows for the numerous rivers and streams. These streams provide abundant quantities of surface water for industrial, municipal and domestic use, and offer excellent opportunities for further hydroelectric power development. Chemical analyses of waters from most sections of the State prove them highly suited to manufacturing and processing.

Of primary importance to the intelligent utilization of water resources in the State is the activity of stream gaging. North Carolina, in cooperation with the U. S. Geological Survey, has compiled valuable continuous discharge records at stations located over the State. The Division of Water Resources and Engineering of the State Department of Conservation and Development maintains a laboratory for the purpose of determining the chemical qualities of the various waters of North Carolina.

TRANSPORTATION

With respect to available transportation facilities for industrial operations and expansion, North Carolina ranks among the most progressive States in the Union. The first State to take over the maintenance of all county roads within its borders, North Carolina's Highway System includes some 58,000 miles. Highways are built and maintained from the gasoline and motor vehicle taxes, while the highway bonds are also being retired with this same revenue.

The total main trackage for the railroads operating in North Carolina amounts to some 4,000 miles. Three great trunk lines, the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, the Southern Railway, and the Seaboard Air Line Railway, extend across the State, and have numerous branch lines connecting with their main lines. The Norfolk Southern Railroad crosses the center of the State, extending from Charlotte to Norfolk. The Norfolk and Western Railroad enters the State in two places, connecting Durham with Lynchburg, and Winston-Salem with Roanoke. More than thirty independent short lines operate wholly within the State.

Truck lines over North Carolina highways and into other States are well developed. The State is crossed by two regular scheduled mail and passenger air routes operated by Eastern Air Lines. Wilmington and Morehead City-Beaufort are two deep sea ports of entry for coast-going vessels, and maintain complete terminal facilities for shipping. The Intra-coastal Waterway and the larger rivers with improved channels have made possible the establishment of barge lines far inland.

ELECTRIC POWER DEVELOPMENT

North Carolina contains 83 electrical generating plants with a total capacity of 983,907 kilowatts. These plants generate during the year over two billion kilowatt hours.

The combination of relatively high rainfall and resulting high stream flow, with favorable topography and foundation conditions for economic dam construction in the mountains and the Piedmont Plateau, has made possible large and economical power developments.

It is estimated that a total of some 800,000 horsepower is potentially available on the river basins of North Carolina for future power development. The electric power rates for commercial and industrial service in North Carolina are fixed according to a sliding scale based upon consumption.

PUBLIC EDUCATION

The North Carolina Public Schools are supported for an eight months' term by a direct appropriation out of the General Funds of the State. Twenty-four million, nine hundred eighty-six thousand dollars have been appropriated for the school year 1938-1939, no part of which comes from an ad valorem tax.

Public School pupils number nine hundred thousand. Three hundred thousand of this number are transported to and from school daily. The State operates 4,200 school buses in its transportation system at a low cost for the nation of $6.00 per child per school year. Due to the low cost in transportation and operation of plant items, the State is able to pay eighty-three cents out of each school dollar in teachers' salaries.

The school buildings of the State are valued at approximately $115,000,000. Buildings valued at $11,000,000 have been erected during the past two years. There were in use in 1937 a total of 897 buildings having more than ten rooms per building.

There are 30,000 employees in the public school system of North Carolina, including 24,000 teachers, 4,200 bus drivers, a large number of janitors, mechanics, clerical assistants, and others.

North Carolina is the only State in the Nation, with the exception of Delaware, which provides an eight months' term of school for all the children of the State, paid directly from the General Funds.

RECREATION IN NORTH CAROLINA

Facilities for public recreation in North Carolina rank with the finest in the country. Awake to the increasing demand for areas suitable to many forms of outdoor sport, the State has established in all of its regions parks, which not only provide facilities for recreation, but embrace leading scenic and historic attractions.

In addition to the six State Parks for public use, North Carolina affords the scenic wonders and superb recreation areas of one-half the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. This area lies along the crest of the Smoky Mountains of the western part of the State. On the east, work will begin shortly upon a National Seashore Park, to comprise Cape Hatteras and much of the famous northern "banks" of North Carolina.

Numerous recreational areas have been set up in North Carolina's two great national forests—the Pisgah and the Nantahala—in the mountain region of the State. These forests each year are hosts to thousands of outdoor enthusiasts, who visit them to inspect their scenic beauty on horseback, along excellent motor trails, to fish, hike, and spend a summer in the open.

Added to these larger public areas are State lakes, wildlife refuges and farms, the State's famous resorts—summer and winter—and the public parks and playgrounds provided by the towns and cities.

No State can boast of finer golf courses than those possessed by North Carolina, and for hunting and fishing, the State has always ranked among the first in the Nation.
